Reference	Assumption of the Blessed Virgin Mary Ukrainian Catholic Parish	A commemorative history for the 50th Anniversary (1958-2008) of the Ukrainian Catholic Parish of the Assumption of the Blessed Virgin Mary in Grande Prairie. This booklet is an update of the 1998 booklet, with the addition of lists of officials for the local church, biographies of three Patriarchs, and biographies of the Bishops of the Ukrainian Catholic Eparchy of Edmonton for the 50 years this church has existed. Ukrainian Greek Catholic services began in Grande Prairie in 1932, but it was not until 1952 that mass was celebrated on a regular basis. These services were held in the Chapel at St. Joseph's Academy on 102 Street. In 1958, a decision was made to build a church, so the congregation was incorporated. In 1959 they purchased a lot on the SW corner of 109 Avenue and 102 Street. Over the next few years the congregation raised funds, decided on the design, and constructed the 40 x 24 ft. building with a vaulted nave. By 1965 they were holding services in the building, but the official opening did not occur until July 20, 1969.	2008			Assumption of the Blessed Virgin Mary Ukrainian Catholic Parish	Grande Prairie

Reference	St. John the Baptist Ukrainian Catholic Church Rycroft	Booklet on the history of St. John the Baptist Ukrainian Catholic Church in Rycroft prepared for the final celebration of liturgy on June 5, 2005. The congregation for this small rural church were Ukrainian immigrants who settled near Rycroft . They held services in homes as early as 1930, and in 1938 began to build a church on land donated by Michael Muzyka. The church was completed in 1939. In 1945, a cemetery was established beside the church. In 1956, the church was moved onto a new basement in Rycroft, a more centralized site. It remained active for another 50 years, but closed in 2003. A final service on June 5, 2005 brought about its decommissioning.	2005			St. John the Baptist Ukrainian Catholic Church

Reference	The Grande Prairie in 1928	The late 1920s was a hectic time in the Peace River Country. A record number of homesteads were being taken out, and the fields were yielding more high quality grain than ever before. The country had long been touted as a land of agricultural prosperity, and, if ever it seemed so, it was during this time. In September 1928, a McDerimid Studio photographer visited the area with a party of promoters and took a series of photographs of the Grande Prairie area. This booklet, illustrated by the McDerimid photographs, gives a snapshot of what the Grande Prairie district was like in 1928.	2003	David Leonard		Grande Prairie Museum	Grande Prairie

Reference	The Venturesome Reporter	"The Venturesome Reporter" is the story of Jim Bowes, written after his death in 1997. From the dust jacket: "Jim Bowes and his brothers Bill, Howie and Dave, sons of a school principal in Moose Jaw, SK, came out of the Depression and the war with the ambition to own a weekly newspaper. With little more than youthful enthusiasm and a determination to work hard, they harvested the opportunities of northern Alberta and succeeded. Jim Bowes combined daring innovation and modern printing technology to build across Canada a chain of sparkling community and specialty newspapers which were popular and profitable. Reference	Wilderness Outpost	"Wilderness Outpost" is "the Fort Vermilion Memoir of Mary B. Lawrence 1898-1907." Mary (Molly) Lawrence was the wife of Fred S. Lawrence, whose father Erastus in 1879 had established the Irene Training School, "the first genuine attempt by Euro-Canadians to instruct people of the First Nations in the Peace River Country in the ways of farming." After Fred and Molly were married in 1898, they journeyed up to Fort Vermilion, where Fred would become one of the most publicized promoters of the Peace River Country. During her nine year stay in Fort Vermilion, May kept notes on people, places, events and circumstances which she later included in her memoir: "Keewaitin: God of the North Wind" and which has now been edited and republished as "Wilderness Outpost". "The manuscript provides a vivid account of life at Fort Vermilion during this time, and reveals much about the interaction of Euro-Canadian settlers, missionaries, traders and others with the resident Metis, Cree and Beaver people. The work also discloses aspects of daily life in the North that are often overlooked in the published accounts of visitors."	2008	Mary B.
