Conditions of Use:

South Peace Regional Archives retains all rights to the material. The material may only be used as stated on this form and in connection with marketing or distributing the product described. Permission expires upon publication/production of the work or completion of the project. Copies may not be retained for future projects. Subsequent use, including later editions or adaptations and related products, will be considered a reuse and requires a new application for permission. The requestor agrees that the material (including electronic files and print copies) will not be copied, scanned, resold, shared, transferred, sub-licensed, or loaned, to another individual, company, or organization.

South Peace Regional Archives must be credited as the holder of the material and the reference number and name of the photographer (if known) must be cited.

The Archives requires a complimentary copy of the work created using a reproduction of Archives material in lieu of charging a publication fee.

The material requested may be protected under the Canadian Copyright Act, which governs reproduction, distribution, public display, and other uses of protected works. The user of this material is responsible for compliance with the law. In cases where the material is not the public domain and the Archives is not the copyright holder, the material is provided only for research/private study. It is the requestor's responsibility to find out who holds copyright and obtain the necessary permissions. Archives staff will supply the requestor with the copyright holder contact information in their possession (subject to privacy laws) but are not responsible for locating the holders or obtaining permissions for the requestor.
